Essentials Components for Reliable IT Career

Conditions and Dimensions of Career Development for Reliable, Sustainable & Scalable career through Non-Formal, Non-Accredited System

We believe in a transformative approach to career development, business, and education in the IT field. A framework for transformative journey during which you're not just learning IT skills but shaping a career that stands resilient against the personal limitations, tests of time and market dynamics. Embrace the power of self-reliance and pave the way for a brighter future in IT field.

Following is a recommended training framework which is built on fundamentals those empowers individuals to be architects of their own careers and champions in the dynamic world of information technology. Here's a glimpse into our fundamentals and guiding recommendations:

1. Empowerment through Self-Cause: An aspirant can be driving force behind one's career. Taking charge and being the cause, rather than the effect, empowers individuals to shape their destinies. Approach is being cause in the matter of career and professional growth. Taking 100% Responsibility of own career.

(Key: Cause in the matter, having empowering context)

2. Develop your career beyond constraints: Constraints such as financial limitations, educational backgrounds, age, physical appearance or geographical boundaries do not hinder your career development. One can start at any grass-root or entry level to reach the top. The keys to success lie in declaration, willingness, commitment, accountability, and integrity. There must be availability of reliable structure of fulfillment for your success.

(Key: Being unreasonable, structure of existence and structure of fulfilment)

3. Continuous Evolution and Growth: A successful IT career must be a journey of evolution, expansion and continuous growth. Generate for yourself a pathway and empowerment that lead to both personal and professional advancement.

(Key: Continuous training and development; The Compound Effect by Darren Hardy)

4. Dynamic Curriculum for Market Relevance: Ensure a curriculum for yourself which is a living entity, constantly adapting to market demands and competency requirements. You ensure for yourself that you are equipped with the latest skills and knowledge.

(Key: Ensuring curriculum for your own career and life)

5. Critical Skills for Marketplace Success: Recognize the skills those are critical to your professional role, responsibilities and performance. The critical skills are as important as breathing for life. This focus on essential abilities ensures for you to deliver powerful results in the competitive IT marketplace. Ensure that you are among top 3 in the market you serve.

(Key: Leadership position in life and career)

6. Enhancing Skills for Effectiveness: Acquiring skills is just the beginning; give emphasis on continually enhancing your skills to drive effectiveness and gain a winning edge, achieving a perfect 100% on the scoreboard.

(Key: Knowing vs. Doing vs. effectively doing | Metaphor: In football game knowing how to hit a ball, hitting a ball and hitting the ball into the goal)

7. Three-Stage Test of Career Strength: Inquire, test, assess, ensure and inspect careers against three critical stages: (Stage-1) Reality, Reliability and Workability; (Stage-2) Viability, Sustainability, Stability; (Stage-3) Credibility, Dependability, Scalability. This ensures the robustness of careers against real-world challenges.

(Key: I get what I ensure and inspect; not what I expect; ensuring much ahead of time)

8. Power and Preparation in the Face of Challenges: In the ever-evolving IT landscape, preparation is the key. You prepare yourself to navigate complexity, ambiguity, volatility, and uncertainty (CAVU) with unwavering strength. The preparation for great career is accomplished much ahead of time. We get what we ensure and inspect, not what we expect. People never plan to fail but they fail to plan and prepare. Prior proper planning and preparation prevents poor performance (7P's) in personal and professional life.

(Key: Acknowledge default existence of complexity, ambiguity, volatility, and uncertainty (CAVU); Power and strength of career allows least damage due to CAVU.)

9. A Shift from Dependency While Rethinking Career Advancement: Consider a shift from dependency on degrees or employers for career advancement acknowledging the significance of transformational learning. This approach extends beyond traditional education, fostering personal and professional growth through self-discovery and personal transformation. Coaching and leadership initiatives guide individuals to unlock their latent potential and navigate their careers with purpose.

(Key: Transformational learning matters; coaching and leadership structure is for champions)
